CURRENT STATUS

This brief states the values KCST is built on and the community programs it runs or intends to run. KCST is an early-stage company. Where a commitment depends on future revenue, it is described as a commitment, not as money already given. KCST is not a registered charity, and contributions to KCST are not tax deductible.

1. Why This Brief Exists

KCST's website describes a Humanity First mission. A mission statement is easy to publish and hard to check. This brief exists so a reader can see what the mission actually commits us to, what is already happening, and what is still a plan.

2. The Mission

To build the trusted software that bridges the gaps in the systems people depend on, engineering security and dignity into healthcare, housing, and energy, and using our success as a force for good to shelter our veterans, empower working families, restore our shared planet, and inspire the next generation.

Three words organize it: Humanity First, Family First, Community First. Technology is measured by the human outcomes it produces. The company is meant to strengthen the households it touches. Commercial milestones are meant to turn into local impact.

3. Five Directives

DIRECTIVE	WHAT IT MEANS IN PRACTICE
Healing the system, protecting the patient	Build healthcare software that replaces fax machines and phone tag with a verified record, and never sell the data inside it
A family first foundation	Build Light of Joshua to help families move from crisis to housing, and partner with child care and working parents
Standing with the workforce and our veterans	Remove the out-of-pocket barriers that keep people from starting work, and support veteran housing and aid
Nurturing and restoring our earth	Support environmental restoration and cleaner technology, because our platforms run on energy
Lighting the way for the next generation	Mentorship, entrepreneurship workshops, and technology education through churches, youth groups, and local organizations

4. Programs

4.1 The Worker Kit Initiative

Born from lived experience in the labor market, the Worker Kit Initiative is designed to cover the last mile of job readiness for temp and day labor workers: steel-toed boots, high-visibility gear and PPE, masks, safety glasses, and fuel cards for getting to the job site. KCST intends to work with labor agencies to reach workers directly.

4.2 Youth and Community Roots

KCST supports local community work, including a monthly partnership with Treasure Coast Barbers United (TCBU) for "Self-Care and Community Feast" mobile grooming and meal events, youth mentorship for ages 11 to 18 in financial literacy and mindfulness, support for homeless veteran housing and aid, and entrepreneurship workshops with local churches and community groups.

4.3 Environmental Stewardship

KCST's environmental interest centers on replacing toxic legacy chemicals in industrial settings with safer, performance-equivalent alternatives, including formulations free of TCE and PCE, the solvents restricted under the EPA's 2025 rules. This is a research and investment interest. It is not a KCST product, and no environmental performance results are claimed here.

5. The Kelshad Catalyst Commitment

The Kelshad Catalyst is KCST's commitment that a share of commercial success funds the programs above, including direct support for veteran housing and aid. KCST is pre-revenue on its core platforms. The commitment applies as revenue arrives, and the share and its use will be reported once there is something real to report. No dollar amount, number of people served, or number of kits distributed is claimed in this brief.

6. What This Mission Does Not Change

The mission never overrides honesty about what our products can do. Every claim in every KCST technical brief is held to the same External Representation Standard regardless of how good the cause behind it is. A company that says it puts people first has to be the most careful about what it tells them.
